

Analyzing Your Campaign

Determining Your Campaign Potential

1. Giving Potential

Giving potential is a benchmark figure that represents an organization's departments, or individuals potential to give to the United Way Campaign.

It is calculated for an individual at the fair share giving standard of 1% of annual salary (i.e., Annual salary of $30,000 x fair share standard of 1% = $300 annual contribution). Potential figure for departments and organizations can be done in the same manner. A guide for evaluating the potential achieved of an organization is:

Excellent Achievement:	90% + of potential achieved.
Good Achievement:	60% to 90% of potential achieved.
Average Achievement:	30% to 60% of potential achieved.
Minimal Achievement:	Under 30% of potential achieved.

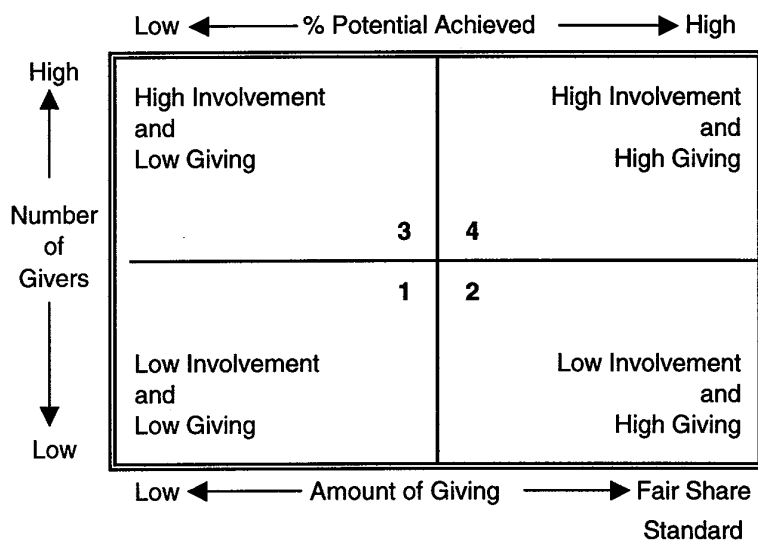

Opportunities for greatest campaign growth usually exists in the average achievement area.

2. Employee Participation

Employee participation is a figure that represents the amount of individual involvement in the campaign. Employee participation is calculated as a percentage of giving employees contributing to the United Way campaign out of the entire work force.

3. Average Gift Per Giver

Average gift per giver is calculated by dividing the total employee contributions by the number of employees giving. The relationship of employee participation and size of contribution to potential achieved is illustrated in the following Potential Achievement chart:

In Box 1 – Organization has a weak campaign effort or a campaign in the initial start up stage.

Box 2 – Relies on a few good steady givers but does not have an effort to increase the number of givers. This is a sign of a “routine campaign” effort.

Box 3 – Campaign asks all employees to get involved by giving something. Very high participation is often an indicator that campaign uses pressure rather than community needs as a solicitation strategy.

Box 4 – Organization has good involvement and good giving amounts. Usually indicates a well rounded campaign with good employee understanding and involvement at top management and other levels in the organization.
